Chapter 1 by Adam

Kvatch, a beautiful town. An elegant city in its own right. Even though the rivalry between both Kvatch and Skingrad had created years of unrest and skirmishing, the city was now calm.

Well, it WAS calm.

The remaining survivors hid with me in the chapel of Akatosh. An amazing building, before the Daedra destroyed most of it. Brother Martin insisted that we would be saved, but how would he know? My armour was heavy with sweat and smelled of blood. Smoke lightly came through the doors, it was I and two other guards left in the city, the rest escaped or died trying.

Noise came from outside, and resisting the strength of my captain, I rushed outside to see the watch general and an adventurer alongside him fighting scamps. The stupid things had no chance of living.
